APPLICABLE STATUTES

AGENCY
JUSTIFICATION

The reconciliation process involves a comparison of the number of ballots received by the county clerks as documented in the statewide voter registration system against the number of ballots that were counted. This involves three sources: (1) information in the statewide voter registration system concerning validated return identification ballots and how many voters voted in person at a voter service center; (2) the number of invalid ballot conditions that were recorded during the ballot opening process at the State counting centers; and (3) information reflected in the form of the election results indicating how many ballots were counted.

In regard to the first source, you would need to inquire with the county clerks as it relates to the statutory duties and responsibilities of the county clerks. Specifically, in regard to combined federal, state, and county elections, “[t]he counties shall be responsible for voter registration, absentee voting, voter service centers, places of deposit, and the mailing and receipt of ballots.” HRS § 11-110(b)(1)(A). Information concerning the validation of mail ballots and voters voting in person at a voter service center are recorded in the statewide voter registration system. The data in the statewide voter registration system constitutes each county’s data for purposes of determining its release. Additionally, the county clerks have specific statutory provisions, such as HRS § 11-97, that relate to their release of information from the statewide voter registration system.

With the above in mind, your request, to the extent it involves the contents of the statewide voter registration system, is denied as it falls into categories of documents exempt from disclosure under HRS § 92F-13(3) and (4) (i.e. “Government records that, by their nature, must be confidential in order for the government to avoid the frustration of a legitimate government function,” and “Government records which, pursuant to state or federal law including an order of any state or federal court, are protected from disclosure”).

However, as it relates to the second source, the number of invalid ballot conditions recorded during the ballot opening process, it is granted in that this notice indicates the copying costs involved with providing you with the invalid ballot log that would permit you to determine that number.

Finally, in regard to the third source, in the form of the election results, it is granted as the election results are available on our website at <https://elections.hawaii.gov/election-results/>.
